Cerasum

The flowing surface of these rounded, burnished stones of steel is the first thing that you see and reach out to touch. They are as smooth as the stones in the bed of a stream, as dark and fascinating as glowing coals in a fire. Their round, organic forms and warm colour mark them as members of a single family, yet it is their weight that gives them substance, the feel of solid steel in the palm of your hand. The earrings have a dark and lustrous coat; the weight the ring calls attention to your slender hands, and the burnished stone at your throat is warm and always there.
